

MORNING APPEAL.

Wednesday, October 13 1886

A FALSE CLAIM.

Congressman Woodburn makes a good point on the Democratic platform. He says in his speeches that while they give Senator Fair great praise in introducing and working for the Chinese Restriction bill, that he never introduced or did anything for it, and that its defeat is due entirely to the Democratic House. Section VII of the Democratic State platform reads as follows:

The introduction by Senator Fair of his Chinese Restriction bill and his success in passing the same, deserves the approval of the entire people of the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Woodburn proves by the records that John Sherman introduced the bill and it passed the Republican Senate unanimously. Sherman, Edwards, Logan, Dawes, and others, have been to the Coast and had their ideas materially changed on this question. But La Martine's remark that the Bourbons never change their ideas or learn anything new, seems to still hold good, and when the bill came into the House it was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, of which young Perry Belmont, a New York dude, is Chairman, and it has never been heard of since and never will be. He said openly that it should never be brought up for passage.—Gazette.

"PINKERTON'S MEN."

Armour & Co; the Chicago packers, Saturday marched a force of armed Pinkerton men into one of their factories, in anticipation of a strike that did not occur. But the men in the factory refused to go on working under the eyes of armed men, nor do we blame them.

It is sometimes a wonder to us that the Chicago workmen do not get tired of the Pinkertons and their men, and it is not unlikely that the question of the propriety and safety of maintaining such a force, independent of National or State control; will become, at an early date, one of the issues in the Western-Central States.

Such work as the Pinkerton men are called upon to do should be done by the regular police or militia; and if the police and militia are not numerous enough or well enough organized, they should be made so. That is the American way of keeping order and protecting property and the only safe way. We do not believe in the maintenance of bodies of armed men for the use of anybody rich enough to hire them.—Daily Report.

A Great Day's Work.

Is anything necessary to establish W. R. Chamberlain's reputation as one of the best presiding officers in this country, at a race track, it was forthcoming on Saturday. The amount of racing gotten off in eight hours, was simply remarkable, and such good judges as Theodore Winters, and others say it was the biggest day's work ever done on this Coast if not in the country. The races on Friday all had to be crowded in, except two short dashes, that were worked off before the postponement. The time was set for 9 o'clock, but it was after 10 before a start was made, and the two big days programmes were worked off before dark, to the surprise of everyone, all thought that there would be at least unfinished races left over. There was no hurry or jar, no confusion or rush, but everything was kept right up and still plenty of time was given for everything.—Gazette.

At the great Henry George ratification meeting in New York the Rev. Heber Newton was one of the speakers, and Professor de Leon, of Columbia College, was another. Charles Wingate aroused the enthusiasm of the audience by his definition of a crank, which, he remarked, was one of the epithets that had been applied to George. "A crank," said Mr. Wingate, "is a piece of machinery which effects revolutions."—George W. Adams, President of the Evening Star Newspaper Company, died at his home in Washington, Sunday.
